

"Think, Believe, Receive" for the Business World

Leadership of anything - a work-group, clients, a sports team and, most importantly, your own life - requires decisions. Sometimes those decisions will be popular, sometimes they will be unpopular. The most important factor any of us can incorporate into our decisions is Integrity.

Many popular business success theories would have us believe the most effective strategy to working with others is to develop a manipulative process: to make other people do what we want them to do. Following this approach, at the end of the day we often find ourselves exhausted, with no real sense of accomplishment and no benefit to the bottom line. And what happens when your team members discover they have been manipulated? Anger, estrangement, isolation and resentment - exactly the opposite of our goal. In the "Think, Believe, Receive" process for business we learn that the first step to being an effective leader is being good with yourself. "Think, Believe, Receive" for the Business World helps us regain our center and lead by example. By developing these skills and getting back to our true selves, we find power we have forgotten we have. Our leadership becomes more focused and effective. Our teams grow stronger and at the end of the day, we find a true sense of accomplishment and synergistic business success.

"Think, Believe, Receive" for the Business World can be tailored to your meeting requirements: one to three hour seminars; on-site or conference settings.
